

News Items for 2005

8th December 2005 - Archaeology of Auchalton Meadows

On the Thursday evening Thomas Rees gave a lecture with slides on the archaeology of the Scottish Wildlife Trust reserve at Auchalton Meadows near Kirkmichael. The reserve contains the remains of an early nineteenth century limestone quarry and limekilns along with associated accommodation and storage buildings. The lecture was part of the Ayrshire Archaeological and Natural History Society lecture programme.

8th December 2005 - Archaeology of Auchalton Meadows

On the Thursday evening Thomas Rees will give a lecture with slides on the archaeology of the Scottish Wildlife Trust reserve at Auchalton Meadows near Kirkmichael. The reserve contains the remains of an early nineteenth century limestone quarry and limekilns along with associated accommodation and storage buildings. The lecture will be given at 7.45pm at the Carnegie Library, Ayr as part of the regular Ayrshire Archaeological and Natural History Society lecture programme.

20 February 2005 – Picts & Hermits; Cave dwellers of Fife

Sunday saw the screening of the Time Team episode from their excavations at the Wemyss caves in Fife (see News 06 June 2004). We were all delighted to see our staff appearing in back of shot, busy excavating or monitoring the machines. The in-house star was Douglas Gordon who had managed to have a speaking role with the line 'it's a bit loose'; fortunately no more media exposure is expected in the near future.

15 January 2005 – Archaeology of Auchalton Meadows

On the Tuesday evening Thomas Rees gave a lecture with slides on the archaeology of the Scottish Wildlife Trust reserve at Auchalton Meadows near Kirkmichael. The reserve contains the remains of an early nineteenth century limestone quarry and limekilns along with associated accommodation and storage buildings. The lecture was given at SAC Auchincruive as part of the regular SWT lecture programme.